Jaundice Liver Complaint all Bilious Complaints Sick Headache Heart Burn Indigestion, Habitual Costiveness, Piles Palpitations of the Heart Loss of Appetite, Dyspepsia, Nervous Affections Debilitated Stomach Languor Depression of Spirits Chronic Rheumatism, Cutaneous Diseases Cancer Syphilis Diseases Scrofula Impurities of the Blood Pimples and Pustules on the Face Hereditary Humors Cold Sores and all diseases arising from an injudicious use of mercury

The attention of the invalid public and all those afflicted by any of the above diseases is respectfully called to the merits of a new and invaluable preparation from an original recipe of a distinguished physician combining in itself the most active medicinal properties of two of the very first articles in the Materia Medica

The Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters, were introduced to the public about twelve months ago, and during that period their success has been so great as to induce the proprietor to offer them with still more confidence in the full belief that they entering into more extensive use they will prove a blessing to all those suffering from the diseases above enumerated

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION.

This is a disease the cause and origin of nine tenths of all the complaints the torture of civilized society has its foundation in a derangement of the stomach and bowels Those afflicted by it are cut off from the enjoyment of the pleasures of the table and suffer a regular step of debilitation and Dyspepsia is a fatally neglected into the forerunner of many dangerous diseases if not of death itself. At its first appearance it should be checked by an attention to diet and regularity by the use of some mild and salutary medicine All classes of men are daily falling victims to the ravages of this fatal disease Let the WOOD'S Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters be used as a delightful tonic and a certain remedy for Dyspepsia and Indigestion

The Bangor Democrat and the Tariff

The Democrat wishes us to explain what the entire protective policy is the tariff is We have repeatedly labored to show that a protective tariff is essentially necessary to the welfare of the people of the United States, and have endeavored to sustain this position by a multitude of reasons Among the reasons we have given are that the policy of protecting the great interests of the people has been adopted by all the civilized nations on the Globe, and thus the necessity is imposed upon our country of doing the same that the abundance and low rate of interest on capital and the wonderfully cheap labor of Europe give them an advantage over the less capitalized the higher rates of interest and the higher price of labor in this country We have endeavored to show that the protective policy gave confidence to capital and labor in our country to engage in manufactures, not to mention the increasing the price of manufactured articles, as by securing the American market to the American workman at fair producing prices and to this standard home competition would at length bring matters if a steady system was pursued But it surely cannot be necessary now for us to repeat these arguments, or to allude farther to their number or their character It is hardly possible that even the Democrat can be in doubt about what we mean by the protective policy

The Democrat goes to submit serviceably to the doctrine of Secretary Walker and the Washington Union that the tariff must be reduced to the revenue standard The most natural mode by which this can be effected, it seems to us is, to bring the rate of duties down to the lowest uniform rates which will produce the amount required This will produce a horizontal tariff laying on an equal duty on tea and coffee, now free spices, drugs dyes, furs hats boots, &c Now it is clear that this horizontal tariff would not operate equally a tax twenty per cent would not rely shut out some articles and of course no duties would be received and if the percentage of revenue was based on the whole amount of imports there would be such a case be a deficiency in the revenue Besides the fluctuations in the land revenues, which the Democrat would have pointed to the Treasury, would cause continual fluctuations and a perpetual change would be made in our revenue system or some sort of sliding scale, the operations of which those engaged in business would not understand, must be adopted

The doctrine of the Democrat is, that a tax on imports for the support of government, regard should be had to the amount of revenue only, and that no higher duties should be levied on those articles which come in competition with the products of home labor than on others indeed if revenue only is to be considered we see not why even lower duties should be levied on all the various articles that come in competition with the manufactures and productions of our own people than on others, that their importation may be encouraged and the revenue secured In this discrimination purely for revenue we must lay high duties on tea, coffee, ivory, mahogany and all such articles as we cannot produce here, while we must lay low duties on cloths, wool, boots, hard ware, ready made clothing, &c, and the duties must be so low as to bring the foreign articles into full and formidable competition with the domestic, and thus insure large importations This system would in our estimation be sinking down the protective policy to a tariff and would be disastrous to the welfare of American industry

A protective tariff is the present, is adjusted on precisely opposite principles—imposing high duties on such articles as competes most formidably with our own products—such as we could very well produce here—and low duties on other articles which neither our natural position, or the habits of our people enable us to produce advantageously, thus no duties on tea and coffee which are of such a nature referred to and which the great mass of our people consider as necessaries of life. A protective tariff would impose the lowest duties on raw materials, higher on the raw product partly from, and higher still on the finished fabric so from such material — Discrimination would go through the tariff in favor of the great interests of the labor of our own country

We might go on at great length in illustration of this matter, but it does seem to us that we have said enough to explain to our neighbor what we mean when we say that a tariff based on revenue purely is in its nature antagonistical to a tariff for protection We wish to be understood that we hold it to be as much the duty of the government of this country to protect the industry of its people by wise legislation as it is to protect the liberties of the people by its arms Indeed if the latter duty were successfully denied we should insist upon the former

Temperance Lecture.

Mr Kellogg the famous Buckeye Temperance lecturer—the mighty catarrect in the cause, addressed our people at the First Parish church last evening He arrived in the Boat at noon and a very important notice was given of his arrival or his intention to lecture and but few were present His remarks however were of a character to awaken new interest in the cause with those who listened and we wish that thousands had listened Mr Kellogg left in the boat this morning but we hope may by and by be induced to return and spend some time laboring in the temperance cause

Remarks were made by Mr Warren of Boston calculated to show the insidious character of rum and its companions He declared his convictions, based upon observation, that intoxicating drinks are sold at the establishment of Messrs Winton and Porter on Main street We announced with pleasure their determination some time since to abandon the traffic and we have ever since supposed that they kept a temperance establishment We state the remark of Mr Warren that they may correct it, or stand upon their merits before the community so far as this press is concerned

☞ Mr Jonathan Cowan, a man of about fifty years of age having a family in this city, left his home early on Saturday morning last, with the intention, as was supposed, of proceeding to his work, but since that time nothing has been heard of him nor can any information be gained concerning him His family are greatly distressed at his absence and any intelligence regarding him will be gratefully received by them He was engaged generally in labor about the wharves and vessels in the harbor and it is feared that he may have been drowned

☞ During the thunder shower yesterday afternoon hail stones measuring six inches in circumference fell in large quantities about four miles from this city, on Essex Street At the mill house of Mr Mulch on the Rail Road the glass in one end was entirely broken out by the hail

☞ A boy aged about seven years, a child of an Irish family was accidentally run over, in this city by a horse and waggon yesterday afternoon He received several flesh wounds about the face but no bones were broken

A violent personal altercation took place between two lawyers in the circuit court, New York on Friday The names were Ketchum and Cutting The latter was a little too cutting in his remarks and Ketchum resented the matter too quick

☞ The City Hall was well filled last night to witness the moral and instructive performance of the Drunkard, or the Fallen Saved It will be performed this evening for the last time in this city

☞ The weather here at the present time, can t be beat!

Portland and Montreal Rail Road.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier

In my last article upon the subject of this Rail Road, I urged people to come forward and build this and other Rail Roads The only reason why people do not do this is because they do not, I fear understand the great advantage of Rail Road communication, and how much it would enhance the wealth of the State It has been estimated that the Western Rail Road from Boston to Albany has enhanced the wealth of the towns which it passes through, twice or thrice the cost of the Road, and it has also enhanced the value of every port on of the State far beyond the calculations of the most sanguine of its friends

The great Erie Canal had its advocates and its enemies, but after it was constructed the results outstretched the wildest calculations of its most enthusiastic advocates—and we are reaping great benefits from these (to us) foreign works

Some will say that they cannot take stock in this Road as it will benefit those near the Road more than it will them,—but it must be borne in mind that we must begin somewhere to build in order to get a Rail Road to accommodate all Shall we refuse a small gain because others receive a large one? By no means But some will say I am arguing and pleading for the community to give, but this is not the case, for I fully believe that every one who takes stock in this Road will make a good investment, and will receive semi annual dividends, besides having the satisfaction of aiding this great public work, which is destined to be extended through the State, and up the valley of every river of importance in Maine

Much has been said about the new country which this road is to pass through—at its being disadvantageous to the route, but it is not so, for it must be evident to any one acquainted with the lumbering business, that the new country which this Road is to pass through will procure more business for the road than any section of country of the same length between Boston and Montreal, after you get above Fitchburg, Mass, or Concord, N H The Road can be built where timber is plenty and at hand, cheaper than in a country where timber has to be transported a great distance

Another view of this new section which not a little inclines me to think favorably of this Road, is this it is well known that the inhabitants of a new country settle upon the banks of rivers, and so it must be in respect to Rail Roads —the wealth and population of a new country will always settle upon its great natural and artificial thoroughfares, and it will readily be perceived that a Road passing through a new country will not be subject to the great risk of competition that Roads are in an old settled country, by the construction of cross and parallel Roads, and must in a very short time become thickly settled near where it passes, and its importance daily increased by collateral lines extending up the valleys as the country increases in population, thus identifying the Road with the growth, wealth and population of the country

It will be an admitted fact that every town of any importance in Massachusetts expects to be accommodated with a Rail road, and consequently the value of all their Roads depends very much upon the location of towns of importance to each other, and a great spirit of competition is going on not only for the construction of rail roads in Massachusetts, but to Montreal No less than four roads are being located to terminate at Montreal, or unite far up in Vermont viz Western Vermont, Central Vermont, Concord and Lebanon, and Concord and Plymouth roads, dividing upon the four roads the travel and business of some 1,200,000 inhabitants taking all Massachusetts and that part of New Hampshire and Vermont nearer these roads than the Portland and Montreal road, while the Portland and Montreal road concentrates the travel and business of over 1,000,000 of inhabitants and bring within twenty four hours travel two distant Provinces whose interests and sympathies are identified with each other EAST

From Salt River.

Mr Printer—I should not have thought of writing to you now, in these rejoicing times of peace, if it hadent a been that they we put the postage down so low in the States, that I wanted to try my hand at writing, so I would have some benefit of the law as well as others, for you see I aint got nothing in particular to write about, only I got a kind a hankering to say something to you about old times, and to inquire arter some of our old friends There is one thing too, that I do want to talk about, that kind a worries me, and that is this Texas business — They tell me that Squire Polk has annexed Texas to the States, now do tell if it is true a fact? Well wo d a thought it But what he a done don t worry me now so much as what I m frad he will do I m frad the next thing he ll do will be to nex Salt River to Texas, and if he should do that, I should burdock, I know I should, for in the first place its dreadful unhealthy and then the people are such a set of rowdis k, why we shouldent have any piece of our lives,—why to tell you the truth I d about as lives be in jeopardy as in Texas and they say that is the worst place on the whole arth Now if you should hear any thing of the kind I wish you d rite up to me and I ll get up an indignation meeting the first thing so as to manufacture a little pub lic opinion and perhaps we can stop it

I dont know but what I ought to say too much agin Squire Jewett and Squire Parks, when I use to write to you before, but I wouldn t be I love them, that they were doing what they did for the good of the people I thought they were all for self, but if what I hear is true I suppose I was mistaken I hearn say the other day that they both on em had left all their friends and gone off to form paris kind of missionaries like, in the public service Who d a thought it, they must feel dreadfully to go away there where they cant buy their grog at Robes I shouldent wonder if twos said by some that they were transported Well, if I said anything wrong agin em I m willing to be forgiven

If all stories is true Squire Polk is making quite a fortune at the end of Squire Fyler s administration He seems to be pocking off all the bobs to that he can They say up here that Squire Stone he that suffered so much to save the people in the Bath Custom House, is licked out and that they ve put the office out to Nurse Wonder if it is a dry nurse? Well, I pity the Col faith, for a rolling Stone gathers no Morse without you can roll out of a good office into a better one

Do tell if that story about the false vouchers is true What would the gomanrysay if they knew it? Now I think Squire Anderson is a pretty clever man, and I don t believe he d had anything to do with it if he hadent been Harrised to death enemost We l, there s a set of harpies round the country who flock round an opportunity to sponge a little money out of Uncle Sam, like a flock of Mother Carey s chickens round a junk of blubber

Squire Andrews stays with us yet, and looks pretty well, tho he aint wholly yet over his re Morse, he lives upon the hopes of another surplus revenue Squire Moreton has been poxed out of Marion, and has gone to Boston and I suppose by that time has got into his old customs

It seems to me we are going to have pretty pokerish times Texas poked on, and the Tariff poked off, and a war with Mexico poked at us, but I hope we shall be able to poke our way out of this snarl by and by No more at present, from yours till death PETER WIGGIN

The Irish Heart --- A True Story

BY MRS L MARIA CHILD

[Concluded]

This vehemence subsided after awhile, and they talked more calmly of how they should hide their disgrace from the neighborhood — That their hearts were sad they could not conceal Day after day their frugal meals were removed almost untasted and every one stepped about silently, as after a funeral The very cows came slowly and discontentedly as if they heard grief in the voice of their young mistress, when she called them to be milked And the good old mother no longer crooned at her spinning wheel the song she had sung over the cradle of her darling boy Nora at first persisted in her plan of crossing the Atlantic, but her father forbade it, and she said no more But her heart grew more and more impatient. She spoke less of James, but she sighed heavily at her work, and her eyes were often red with weeping At last she resolved to depart unknown to any one She rose stealthily at mid night, tied up a small bundle of clothing, placed a little bag of money in her bosom, paused and gazed lovingly on her sleeping parents, hastily brushed away the gathering tears, and stept out into the moolight She stood for a few moments and gazed on the old familiar hills and fields, on the potato patch, where she and James had worked together many a day, on the old well, by the side of which the May gowans grew, and on the clear white cabin where the dear old ones slept She passed into a little shed, that served as a stable for the animals, and threw her arms about the donkey's neck, and kissed the cow, that knew her voice as well as her own mother did She came forth weeping, and gazed on the old homestead, as she would gaze on the face of a dying friend. The clustering memories were too much for her loving heart Dropping on her knees, she prayed, in an agony of sorrow, "I'll be a sin to go away from the good old father and mother, perhaps never to see them agin, till the judgement day, thou art father of heaven, will forgive me for thou knowest I can not leave him alone wid his great trouble!"

Then crossing herself, and looking toward the beloved home of her childhood, she said in a stifled voice, 'The Mother of Glory be wid ye, and bless and keep ye all'

Half blinded with tears, she wended her way over the moon lighted hills, and when her favorite cow called as usual for her milking pail, in the first blush of the morning, she was already far on her way to Dublin

And had James been criminal? In the eye of the law he had been, but his sister was right, when she said he had no intention to do a wicked thing Not long after his arrival in America, he was one day walking along the street, in a respectable suit of Sunday clothes, when a strange came up, and entered into conversation with him After asking some indifferent questions, he inquired what his coat cost

Sixteen dollars, was the answer

'I will give you twenty for it,' said the stranger 'for I am going away in a hurry, and have no time to get one made

James was as unsuspecting as a child He thought this was an excellent opportunity to make four dollars to send to his darling sister, so he readily agreed to the bargin

'I want a watch, too, said the stranger 'but perhaps you would not be willing to sell yours for ten doll ars'

James frankly confessed that it was two dollars more than he gave for it, and very willingly consented to the transfer Some weeks after, when he attempted to pass the money the stranger had given him, he found, to his dismay, that it was counterfeit

After brooding over his disappointment for a sometime, he came to a conclusion at which better educated men than himself have sometimes arrived He thought to himself—"It is hard for a poor man to lose so much, by no fault of his own Since it was put off upon me I will just put it off upon somebody else May be it will keep going up the road a ic, or somebody will loose it that can better afford it than I can

It certainly was a wrong conclusion, but twas a bewilderment of the reasoning powers in the mind of an ignorant man, and did not involve wicked intention He passed the money and was soon after arrested for forgery He told his story plainly but, as he admitted that he knew the money was counterfeit when he passed it, the legal construction of his crime was forgery in the second degree He had passed three bills, and had the penalty of the law been enforced with its utmost rigor he might have been sentenced to the State Prison for fifteen years, but appearances were so much in his favor, that the court sentenced him but for five years

Five years taken away from the young life of a laboring man, spent in silent toil in shame and sorrow for a blighted reputation was, indeed, a heavy penalty for confused not one of right and wrong concerning bits of paper stamped with a nominal value But law is the wisest and best administrator cannot always make nice distinctions between thoughtless errors and wilful crimes

It is probable James never felt the degree of compunction that it was proper every conscient ought to feel for the idea was ever with him that if he had sinned against government he had sinned against God That he had disgraced himself he knew full well and felt most keenly The thoughts of what Nora and his good old mother would suffer, if they could see him driven to hard labor with thieves and murderers, tore his soul with anguish

He could not bring his mind to write to them, or send them any tidings of his fate He thought it was better they should suppose him dead, than know of his disgrace Thus the weary months passed silently away The length of his term and the hour of his release were gone Day by day he grew more and more sad and sick

He had been in prison about four years, when one of the keepers told him that a young woman had come to visit him and he had received permission to see her He followed silently, wondering who it could be, and a moment after he was shocked at his sister s arrival For some time nothing but sobs were audible They looked mournfully in each others faces then fell on each other necks, and wept again

And so you know we, mavourneen said Nora at last, trying to smile through her tears

'Did you tell your father?' replied he, drawing her more closely to his breast 'A cushla machree (7) and wouldn't I know your shadow on the wall in the darkest cellar they could put me in But who care wid you mavourneen?

'Troth said it was mine I came I ran away in the night I hope it wasn t wrong I have the good father and mother when they had spoke agin my coming I would not like to do any thing displeasing to God But Jimmy machree my heart was breakin w dout you, and I could not live you alone wid your great trouble Sure it a long age I would have been w d you, if you had let us know of your misfortin

The poor fellow wept afresh at these assurances of his sister's affect on When he was able he told her circumstantially how the great trouble had come upon him

'God be praised for the words you spake replied Nora 'It will take a load off of hearts at home when they hear of the same I always said there was no sin in your heart, for who should know that better nor me, who slept in the same cradle' A blessing be wid you, mavourneen The music in my heart to hear the sound of your voice agin And proud will I be out of you as I used to be when all eyes, young and old, brightened, on you in warm old Ireland

'But Nora, dheelish, the disgrace is on me, said the young man, looking down 'They will say I am a convict

"Sorra a fig I care for what they say, replied the warm hearted girl 'Don t I know the heart that is in you Didn t I say there was no sin in your intentions, though you was shut up in the bad place? And it there had been—if the black murder had been within you, is it Nora would be after laying you alone wid your sin and your shame? Troth, I would weary the saints in heaven wid prayers, till they made you a better man, for the sake of your sister s love But there was no sin in your heart, and proud I am of you a cushlah machee (8) and bad luck to the rogue that brought you into all this trouble

The keeper remended them that the time allowed for their interview was nearly spent

'You will come agin? said James imploringly "You will come to me agin, acushla machree?

'I had to beg hard to see you once replied Nora "They said it was against the rules But when I told them how I come alone across the big ocean to be wid you in your trouble, because I knew the heart that was in you, they send I might come in It is a heavy sorrow that we cannot speak together But it will be a comfort, mavourneen to be where I can look on these stone walls The kind man here they call the chaplain says I may stay wid his family, and sure not an hour in the day but I will think of you, a cushlah (9) The same moon shines on us here that used to shine on us when we had our May dances on the green, in dear old Ireland and when they let you get a glimpse of her bright face, you can think may be Nora is looking up at it, as she used to do when she was your own weeny darlint, wid the shamrock and gowsh in her hair I will work, and lay by money for you, and when you come out of this bad place it s Nora will stand by you, and proud will I be out of you, a cushlah machree

The young man smiled as he had not smiled for many years He kissed his sister tenderly as he answered, "Ah, Nora, mavourneen, its yourself that was always too good to me God s blessing be wid you acushla machree It will go hard wid me, but I will make some return for such goodness"

"And sure its no goodness at all, replied Nora "Is it yourself would be after leaving me alone, and I in the great trouble? Hut, tut, Jimmy, avick Spare n's nothing at all Any body would do it. You're as decent and clever a lad as ever you was Sing that to your heart, mavourneen. It s Nora will stand by you, all the world over"

With a smile that she meant should be a brave one, but with eyes streaming with tears, she bade her beloved brother farewell He embraced her with vehement tenderness, and, with a deep sigh returned to his silent labor But the weight was taken off his heart, and his step was lighter, for

"Hope sunshine lingered on his prison wall,
And love looked in upon his solitude

Nora remained with the kind hearted chaplain, ever watching the gloomy walls of Sing Sing When her brother s term expired, she was at the prison door to welcome him, and lead him forth into the blessed sunshine and the free air Rev John Lucky, the chaplain whose name will live in the grateful recollection of many a poor prisoner, received them into his house, cheered and strengthened their hearts by kind words and judicious counsel and sent them to the office of the Prison Association, No 13 Pine street, New York As James brought certificates of good conduct while in Prison, the Association lent him tools to be paid for if he should ever be able to do so, and recommended him to a worthy mechanic At his place he would have remained, had not his employer needed a journeyman thoroughly versed in his trade It is the policy of Sing Sing not to allow the prisoners to learn all the branches of any business, lest they should come into competition with mechanics out of the Prison What James had been accustomed to do he did with great industry and expertness and he could not do all the mechanic required and was therefore kindly and honorably dismissed

Had he been dishonest he might have gone off with the tools but he came to the office of the Association, to ask whether they were willing he should keep them till he could obtain work elsewhere, and earn enough to pay for them They of course, consented very cordially, and bidding him to remember that, as long as he behaved well, they would always be friends indeed His suite was with him like the sun shine, and their earnest expressions of gratitude were truly affect ng

They are doing well, and doubtless will do well May the blessing of our Father be with them They are two of the kindest hearts and most transparent souls, among the reverent, living and confiding but impulsive people, who above all others, deserve to be called the little children of the nation

BY TO-DAY'S MAIL

From St. Domingo.

An arrival at New York brings four days later news than that received at Philadelphia Frederick Cape Haytien The Dominicans had obtained possession of the town of Lacahobas which they claim as part of their old territory The Haytiens were on their way to town to capture it with their regiments and supposed officers Three regiments are under orders to embark for from the south side of the island, where all is quiet

It was reported that the Dominicans had retreated from Lacahobas after burning it and part of the Haytien army had proceeded to the interior At Port au Prince all was quiet and healthy on the 4th, when the brig Hayti Capt Cullen, sailed

It appears by the New Orleans papers the little late fatal explosion of the boilers of the steamer Marquette has produced considerable excitement in that city Inquest has been held upon the bodies of persons killed and are to undergo a final examination

☞ The Boston Times states that during a severe storm on Monday afternoon the roof of a building in a house in Dowell st was torn off and the house in Dorchester street fell and also killed two men

Eight hundred parts have lost ten of their number, also gave up the expected contest of the cup Hungarian to a short time by rule prosecuting the same

Daniel Osborn and John Griffin were fatally wounded by falling from the roof of a new block, in Rutherford on Monday last
